The President's Corner

May 2018

Scotty Yee

The Year is moving quickly and our Koi seem to be getting excited for the warmer weather. Have you noticed that they have been more active in the past few weeks?? As for being active, our club never sleeps. We are one of the few Koi Clubs in the US with such a large and dedicated membership that puts on so many Annual Events. "With that said", we have our Annual Koi Auction coming up. For those members that want to thin their Herd or Add to their existing collection, the Auction is a great place to support the Club by Volunteering to "work", Sell or Buy Koi. If you are reading our Newsletter for the first time, we are also the Host Club for the upcoming AKCA Wet Lab Seminar and Banquet that is scheduled June 23rd & 24th. You can contact Tamsie Pierce for more info 619-427-9008, or see her at our next meeting.

As your President for the past Two Years my time serving is coming to an end; we will need a Full Slate of Officers to carry on specific duties for the Club. I encourage anyone interested in becoming more active or wanting a larger role in the Club to sign up or Run for one of the upcoming open positions. Volunteerism is the Life Blood of this Club and I know we ask a lot of our members, but in order to produce great events that this Club is known for, we need "everyone's" help.

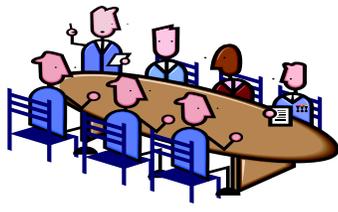

On a Fun note, some might call it torture.....but three of us from San Diego attended and participated in the NorCal Koi Show held in San Jose, CA last month. The "San Diego Boyz" Jefferey Duncan, Andy Woo and I, left San Diego at 4am Friday morning. A stop for Beef Jerky at Harris Ranch and the anticipation of a great dinner at Original Joe's in Downtown San Jose was enough incentive to keep my foot on the pedal. After an 8 hour plus drive our Koi arrived safe and sound at the show grounds. The Show has been billed as the "ZNA NorCal National" Koi Show, where some of the top Koi collectors in the US show up with their best Gosanke (Kohaku, Showa, Sanke). Trying to think positive, but knowing our Koi would be up against some of the best koi in the USA, we were nervous and joked that we hope they gave out "participation" awards. But secretly knowing that our Koi Husbandry and the hard work we have put into our Koi, maybe we would take some awards back to San Diego. Well our hard work paid off. Between the three of us, we took home Reserve Grand Champ B, Baby GC B, Best in size 3 & 7, Best in Class Kohaku, Best In Class Showa, President's Award, Judges' Award, Show Chair Award, and Hernandez Memorial Award. Doing our homework and putting in hard work paid off, it was great and rewarding. Oh I forgot, now we had to drive back home....Oh man.....don't know if I'll do it again.....Um who am I fooling, I'm addicted to Koi, I'm sure I'll be back.

Addendum to Presidents May Column

As I did not attend the April meeting I asked Koi Jack, who filled in during my absence, to comment about the general meeting and he reported the following: Over 40 club members enjoyed John Miller's spectacular koi pond built by Eric the Pond Digger and his show quality collection of koi. Shawn McHenry delivered a couple of new koi that day and we were lucky enough to have him as our speaker. Besides taking general questions he also talked specifically about his trips to Japan when purchasing koi for Mystic Koi. It was an excellent presentation chock full of good koi information truly enjoyed by all!

“KOI” Jack Chapman

Spring/Summer Feeding & Pond Maintenance Plan

So now that pond temps are generally above 65 and even some low 70's have been reported – What's a koi hobbyist to think about? Like most years I am guilty of feeding too much too early and koi poop watch tells me to cut back. With that in mind, I thought I would give you some things to think about concerning koi nutrition at this time of year.

Good time to review your feeding plan for spring and summer. I feed once a day when morning pond temps reach 58 degrees (lower protein levels) and go to two twice a day when the temp reaches 68 degrees. I also raise the protein (38/42) content at 68 degrees. Then at 72 degrees I start moving to my summer feeding plan and go to feeding 3 times a day. Yes, when my pond gets to 76/77 degrees I'm feeding 6 times a day – think auto-feeder if you not available.

How much to feed? Well, make a list of your koi and their individual estimated length. Good to catch and measure a koi that's in the middle for length in your koi collection as a go-by for other koi and go to the koi measurement chart. Even a good thing to pick this time (or fall) of year to record the length of all your koi – should do once a year for good record keeping and evaluation of all the stuff you do with your pond and koi. I personally do it in the fall so to record the results of the summer feeding schedule. So once you have the total weight from the charts I do a 15% plus-up for females over 18 inches and a 15% reduction for males over 18 inches to get a more accurate total fish weight. As anal as I am, I've not weighed each of my koi – but I've thought about it LOL. So feed at 1% of total weight to basically maintain and maybe get very little growth; 2% for moderate growth and good health; and 3% for max growth and good health. This is suggested for ponds with koi of multiple lengths and a wide range from smallest to largest and a range of ages. The feeding schedules for same size and age is different and for another time. For example the above schedule for a pond with say 50 pounds of estimated koi total weight would be as follows: 50lbs = 800ozs and 1% would be 8ozs of food daily - 2% would be 16ozs of food daily – and 3% would be 24ozs of food a day. As a general statement, if your koi collection is mostly under 3 years of age, I would suggest the 3% plan and if mostly 3 to 6 years old the 2% plan and if mostly over 6 years old you could try the 1% schedule but I would never go below 1.5%. The above is for processed koi pellet food. I do not use it when temps are above 76/77 and I feed Manda-Fu with honey/red yams/edamame/krill/shrimp/silk worm pupa/and my home made paste food for that matter.

The five minute feeding time is a good general rule. If you still see food on the surface after 7 minutes then think about cutting back on volume.

Got any koi food (processed koi pellets) over a year old – get rid of it!!

Remember to keep an eye on the early morning poop watch. If you see a lot of feces on the bottom of your pond then you are overdoing the amount and maybe the protein level and I suggest you cut back a little. I use this tidbit (BIG TIME) to evaluate my current feeding schedule!!

So now that the spring/summer feeding plan is in place don't forget that your water quality will deteriorate faster. With more food you have additional ammonia to deal with and with the same pond parameters (filter capabilities), another year's growth and maybe more koi than last year the rate of water quality deterioration will be shorter and you could exceed your filtration capabilities leading to koi health issues to include fish loss. Good time to review your maintenance schedule and your water quality readings and if your test kits are more than a year old you should consider replacement. Don't forget your pond journal and recording your test results.

Some of this you may have seen in past KHA Korner articles, but we get new members each year so from time-to-time I think it prudent to repack and pass along some of the more core-type information for the backyard koi hobbyist.

Koi Club of San Diego Ponder Profile

Sam & Terri Seat
Bonita, California

Sam and Terri Seat reside in a beautiful home in the hills of Bonita with their son (home from the Marine Corps), his cat and lots of koi. Since 1988, when they moved in, they have been transforming their place into a park-like setting with full-grown trees and lots of drought-tolerant landscape. Their xeriscape (water conserving) front yard was featured in San Diego Home and Garden Magazine last year as one of the most drought-tolerant landscapes in San Diego. The backyard is really awesome with a full-size pergola and outdoor fireplace, beautiful flowering plants that attract lots of birds and butterflies and of course a koi pond complete with huge waterfall.

The 4,000 gallon pond, which started out as a 'water garden,' is now home to more than 30 koi. On their first trip to our friends at San Diego Pond and Garden they came home with five $15 koi in addition to plants. As we can all attest... the rest is history! They soon joined the Koi Club of San Diego, started helping out setting up the annual koi show and began learning all things koi. You can tell that they have been taking good notes by the design of their filter system that features an Aqua UV 6,000 filter, 100 watt UV and two pumps (one for normal operation and a larger pool pump for back washing the filter). Needless to say, all backwashed water is put to good use in the backyard where nothing is wasted.

Sam and Terri are now both retired from the Navy, Sam as an Aviation Officer and Terri who ran the Navy Relief Society, helping Sailors and Marines for over 20 years. When it comes to koi keeping, they describe themselves as "casual koi keepers" who have never entered a fish in a show. Most of their koi are either rescues or have been born in the pond. For casual koi keepers, they maintain very good water quality and all the fish are totally happy and healthy.

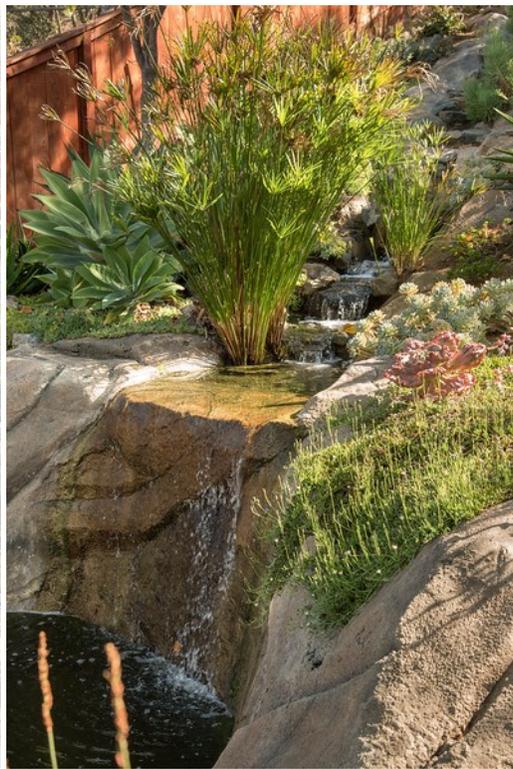

Thank you so much for sharing your home and your Ponder Profile!

Did you come to the show in March and look at all the prize winning fish and get inspired to add too many fish to your own pond?

Well, here's your chance to solve some of that problem. On May 19 Koi Club of San Diego will be holding its annual Koi Auction at Freshwater Flora and Fauna in Escondido (same location as last year). Proceeds from the auction go toward funding for the Koi Show expenses. Fish of all sizes will be up for auction from members' ponds.

We will need all sorts of help to stage this event – One Day, usually over by 3 PM, prices so low you will be thrilled at the bargains. Set up the event, receive fish, traffic control, unbag and rebag the fish, serve lunch, monitor purchased fish going home are just a few of the things you can do to help. And of course, bring fish to sell or purchase even more.

At the April and May general (regular) meetings we'll circulate a sign up sheet or you can contact
